The Battle For Chinatown: After San Francisco's Great Earthquake and Fire of 1906 Joanne Pence

San Francisco's Chinatown was completely destroyed by the 1906 Great Earthquake and Fire. It sat on prime real estate, and to many San Franciscan's, the destruction of the area known for tong wars, gambling, opium dens and "sing-song" girls was seen as the one blessing of the fire. But Chinatown was much more than that. To many people, it was home. Soon, a battle of words ensued between the San Franciscan governing body, and the Chinese people that had international implications. This is a study, using many primary sources, of that battle.
