Cyber Stalker: A Victim's story David Boyer

“CYBER STALKER: A VICTIM’S STORY,” is the true story of Brian Davis, a an aspiring writer whose career was beginning to look promising; three book deals, an on line magazine that was receiving favorable reviews. Then one day in October of 2010, a woman whom he’d thought was a friend turned against him – over a simple misunderstanding – and began an 18 month long cyber-assault on him in public domain, email, postal mail, and by telephone, using intentions of bodily harm and even death threats to intimidate him further. But she didn’t stop there; realizing quickly she couldn’t ruin his reputation on her own merits, she coerced other writers in her social circle into joining her in her assault – through promises of money, publicity, and even sexual favors – and eventually destroying his reputation – and even invading his private life – and changing the way he perceived the internet – and on line acquaintances – forever. Based on fact, intercepted emails, recorded phone conversations, and private investigations, CYBER STALKER: A VICTIM’S STORY is a testament to one man’s fight against impossible odds – the power of the internet – and the cyber stalkers and on line predators that use that power for their own gain – as well as a hunting ground for innocent victims.
